ABOUT YOUR TEACHERSAMY LEYDON

Known for her intuitive sequencing and beautiful music, Amy has been a pioneering force in the Boston yoga scene for the past 15 years. She brings an element of meditation and philosophy into each of her classes and gives her students a reprieve from the outside world while offering them a deeper understanding of their inside world. A dedicated student of various forms of yoga, Amy's main influences include Barbara Benagh, Shiva Rea, and Tom Myers.

RENEE LEBLANC

After years in the corporate world, spending a good deal of her energy arranging meetings and travel around sneaking away to yoga classes any chance she could get, she decided to take the leap out of the office and into the studio. In 2005 she began teaching and practicing yoga full time and has not once looked back. Renee's classes are a powerful vinyasa flow that will challenge you to explore the edges of your physical and mental edge with loads of humor and joy. Always a student first, her teaching is informed by strength and integrity in alignment, curiosity and challenge. Yoga is more than a workout, and much more than a flow, it is a potent means of tending to the health and wellness of the entire body.

TODD SKOGLUND

Todd is the co-founder of South Boston Yoga, established in 2008. He is co-director of the South Boston Yoga 200hr Teacher Training, having trained some of Boston's most beloved teachers as well as many influential teachers around the states and abroad. He teaches at Equinox Fitness Clubs in Boston and leads workshops, trainings and retreats around the globe. Todd has an extensive 20+ year background in Yoga, Martial Arts, Creative Movement, and Personal Training as well as a degree in Eastern Philosophy with a firm foundation in meditation and other internal arts. He teaches with a fierce compassion grounded in intelligently creative classes to bring each student to a stronger, firmer understanding of their own body and health potential.

DAN STEEL

Dan Steel started on his yogic path in 2008 while he was enrolled in an Eastern philosophy course at the Berklee College of Music. Having a background in martial arts and gymnastics, he was immediately drawn to the physically demanding aspects of asana and the focus it required. He has since completed both the foundational and advanced trainings with Ana Forrest, a 200-hour vinyasa training with Ame Wren at Back Bay Yoga, Budokon Yoga training with Cameron Shayne, and Shadow Yoga studies under Matt Pesendian. He is also training in Z-Health, a fitness system inspired by current neuroscience that focuses on improving the connection between brain and body. He strives to offer classes in which students can develop a heightened sense of body awareness, control, and overall focus.

VITO POLITANO

Vito teaches yoga, trains teachers, provides Thai yoga bodywork, practices Metta meditation, and studies energy healing; he is grateful, and inspired to share these powerful practices. His strong desire to share the healing benefits of practice inspired him to combat a debilitating fear of public speaking, and start teaching in 2007. He teaches mindful movement with a focus on breath, and alignment. His care, comprehensive studies, and attention to safety, and therapeutics enable students to open body, heart, and mind in a deep, and sustainable way.

BRAXTON ROSE

Braxton Rose is a ERYT-500 certified yoga teacher. He completed his 200-hour training with Baron Baptiste of Baptiste Power Yoga and completed his 300-hour Training with Claire Este McDonald and Gregor Singleton out of Divine Play Yoga. He is trained in Yin Yoga through Josh Summers and a UMA Reiki Master. Blending concepts from Power, Vinyasa, and Yin yoga with the practices of meditation and reiki, Braxton offers a unique experience that unifies the physical and spiritual elements of the practice.
