

“It’s rare to find a space where social justice and money management converge....The workshop is supportive, insightful and inspirational, and it’s empowering to have the tools to move ‘just giving’ forward. I couldn’t recommend it more highly.”

Next Cohort Beginning Spring 2023 Days/Times TBA Based on Registrants’ Input!*

This six-week online course is designed for those who accept the basic ethical imperative of reparations — and who seek best practices for connecting that ethical imperative with their own economic privileges. Through interactive presentations, discussions, action /reflection and singing, we will:

- ✓ Discover the abolitionist legacy of “vigilance committees” as well as principles of locally-oriented, land-based indigenous solidarity
- ✓ Develop emotional literacy in working with our family money stories
- ✓ Explore interfaith spiritual disciplines of release and accountability
- ✓ Separate questions of “How much can I / we share?” (Phase One) from questions of specific solidarity funding possibilities (Phase Two)
- ✓ Inspire and support each other in committing to lifelong practice!

Sliding scale of $108 to $216 for six online sessions
